Right on, pede. My dad and I drove from Denver and back. Took a more southern route than you pro did. Same experience in terms of the signs.

▼ Dec 26 I drove 4 days from Phoenix to Jacksonville, then Jan 3rd from Jax up to DC. Rarely ever saw any Biden signage but I passed lots of Trump bumper stickers, signs in fields, and Trump flags flying. We are living through yet another hoax (Biden won). Hoax after hoax after hoax. We are being gaslit daily by the main stream media and by big tech.

▼ I love Idaho. I went there this summer (left California) for a short trip and it's glorious. The one negative is Boise--cuck gay pride flags everywhere

Oh, and your capitol building is beautiful

1 Made it through a Costco today without a mask till the very end. Some guy at the hearing aid spot asked me if I wanted a mask he had them. I said no thank you. He said "you have to I don't want to be the bad guy". I replied you are the bad guy.....Uh uh no I'm not. I said and "I guess you won't be the guy walking us into the gas chamber either"..... was it extreme, eh my wife thought so, but I'm done being nice

17 I live 1 hour SF and have seen like 1 sign. Driving through rich area of WalnutCreek and saw a giant trump banner. Almost no Trump signs because around here you will get your car keyed or worse. Lots of supporters, but leftists are violent evil little fucks.

7 Wow you saw Trump support in Walnut Creek? I used to work there and it was agonizing finding anyone that supported Trump. I had to deal with dumbasses thinking Bernie wasn't going to pillage their savings for his next house. It's full of rich white liberals that get drunk all the time and drink La Croix. I had to deal with the insane demand for liquor during the lockdown cause that's the only way people seem to be able to entertain themselves there.

2 I was driving at the ass-end of WC's southern side, old large homes with big yards trying to find the highway like 2 weeks ago. Drove by a hill with a house on it and a 20ft Trump banner. Either way, pre-election to now I think I have seen one Biden sign, I have seen maybe 10+ Trump car stickers. LOL before last summer saw one Bloomburg yard sign, also in Walnut Creek.

1 I lived in Wallet Creek for 2 years, could not wait to leave and leave CA! This was 16 years ago, but the SF area outside of the main city was pretty shitty.

permalink parent save report block reply and I agree, can't even show support or you'll get keyed. Hell, I've been keyed several times and I have a blank and empty car

Me too, got keyed all down side 2003 toyota so did not care other then WHY? I drive very cautiously and use blinkers and let everyone in on highway. Maybe mistaken identity or just crazy person IDK.

▼ As of a few weeks ago, some houses nearby still had Trump flags and signs up. I normally don't travel in that area, but I'm planning to take a drive thru that area Monday to see. This is lefty Southern New England.

2 Did a similar drive a month ago for a funeral, upper left corner down diagonally, only Biden sign I saw was Provo. One. Every other flag was Trump, and half those had multiples on their property.

1 Of course there weren't any Biden signs. He already said on live TV that he didn't need people's votes to get elected. All Biden supporters had to do was kick back and let Dominion do the voting for them. So much ▼ Even here in a blue state I can count the Biden signs I saw on my fingers and not run out.

We dove all the way across Pennsylvania in August and tons of Trump signs, the only Biden signs I saw somebody went along the side of the highway and put them up every half mile or so for about eight signs worth.
Some Biden campaign people set up here at our flea market a month or so before the election with signs and so on. Their booth was deserted when I walked by.
People may have voted for him but no one was enthusiastic about it.
